

Making the Most of Open House

The University of Pittsburgh School of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences offers 27 undergraduate and graduate programs across 13 different disciplines. Open House provides you the opportunity to explore these programs, speak directly with faculty and current students, and obtain information about admission, financial aid and community engagement all in one location! The following suggestions are offered to help you make the most of your visit with SHRS.

Before the Event

- Research the programs available at SHRS.
- Prepare questions for faculty and student representatives. Questions may address financial aid, program requirements, course offerings, facilities, location, student life, faculty, and program reputation. See page 2 for some examples!
- Be prepared to answer questions such as:
 - Why do you want to attend graduate school? When?
 - What would you like to do with this degree?
- Dress casually, but appropriately. Remember, you want to make a good first impression.

During the Event

- Turn on your camera and introduce yourself before asking questions. Conduct yourself in the manner you would like to be remembered.
 - Download a custom Zoom background to help faculty picture you in our classes!
- If there is not enough time to ask all your questions, ask how you can obtain further information.
- After talking with a representative make some quick notes on the information you received.
- Visit the program rooms and student panel.

After the Event

- Follow up with any additional contacts recommended to you.
- Take advantage of contacts made during the event and ask any follow up questions that occur to you.

Possible Questions

For Faculty and Admissions Staff

Admissions

- Who makes the admissions decisions and what are they looking for in a qualified candidate?
